

Accounting History

Call for Papers

Accounting's history in diverse industries and other settings

Special issue based on papers from the eighth Accounting History International Conference
Ballarat, Australia, 19-21 August 2015

A special thematic issue of Accounting History on Accounting's history in diverse industries and other settings is scheduled to be published by mid-2017 based on conference papers presented at the eighth Accounting History International Conference on this theme. Authors are encouraged to address topics on the study of accounting in the distinctive business and non-business contexts in which it is situated, including:

- Accounting innovation within particular industries;
- Industry specific accounting rules, standards and related regulations;
- The role of accounting in enabling or inhibiting the growth of particular industries;
- Transfers of accounting technology between industries;
- Adaptations to accounting technology made within particular industries;
- Industry specific textbooks and educational programs;
- Unique accounting issues within particular industries;
- Accounting in distinctive non-industrial settings, such as religious orders, hospitals, not-for-profit entities, and government and public sector institutions

The review process for the special issue will be conducted separately from, and subsequent to, the conference review process.

Authors of accepted conference papers are encouraged to consider the comments of the conference reviewers, as well as any feedback received at the conference, in revising their paper prior to submitting it for consideration for publication in this special issue of Accounting History.

Authors who have queries about the special issue should contact the guest editors.

Submissions written in English and in accordance with Accounting History style guidelines should be submitted electronically in Word format as per the submission instructions on the journal website (<http://ach.sagepub.com/>) by the cob on 7 December 2015.

Guest Editors:

Alessandro Lai, University of Verona, Italy, email: alessandro.lai@univr.it

Grant Samkin, University of Waikato, New Zealand, email: grantsam@waikato.ac.nz